THE WORKERS
AN EXPERIMENT IN REALITY – THE WEST

A young scholar, recently graduated from Princeton College, travels across the United States as a member of the working class, taking any job he could find, enduring hardships and struggling to make a living. He travelled mainly on foot, designing for himself a social experiment on experiencing different class and culture structures and the reality of working conditions at the end of the 19th century.

*This volume continues the story that began in the first volume (The Workers – An Experiment in Reality: The East), and spans the region from Illinois to California.*
